

Inaugural business dinner hailed a success

CORK Chamber president, John Mullins, has expressed satisfaction at the success of a get-together between Cork and Dublin business people.

Cork Chamber, in association with Quintas Wealth Management, Blackpool and IFG Corporate Pensions, hosted the inaugural Cork-Dublin business dinner in the Burlington Hotel last night, promoting the strong connections that exist between the two regions.

The event provided unique potential for Dublin-based companies to meet with their Cork peers as well as Cork companies doing business in Dublin and it also afforded the opportunity for networking amongst Cork businesspeople who were Dublin-based, Mr Mullins said.

Mr Mullins said the Chamber was delighted to bring this unique event to the corporate calendar, as an occasion for representatives of our two business communities, politics, sports, media and culture, to network and create stronger ties between our two regions and to celebrate successes of Cork and Dublin-based businesses.

Noel Creedon, managing director of Quintas, said the idea was a first class initiative from Cork Chamber and they, along with their business partners, IFG Corporate Pensions, were delighted to support the inaugural event.

Their partnership with IFG Corporate Pensions had enabled both businesses to strengthen distribution, compliment and enhance product offerings and ultimately deliver accelerated growth.

Cork Chamber president, John Mullins, second left, presents Seán O'Driscoll, chief executive of Glen Dimplex Group, with the Outstanding Achievement in Business Award at the inaugural Cork-Dublin Business Dinner at the Burlington Hotel, an event which promotes the strong business connections that exist between the two regions. Also included are: Noel Creedon, (left), Quintas Wealth Management and Gary Owens, (right), IFG Corporate Pensions, sponsors of the event.