

Free Easter business studies seminar

Peter Horgan

Essential French, a leading provider of French and Irish grinds for Junior and Leaving Certificate students in Munster, is continuing its series of study seminars to help students throughout Cork over the Easter holidays.

"Our results in the Junior Cert and Leaving Cert French exams were outstanding again last year," said Natasha Lynch, managing director of Essential French.

"With over two thirds of our students obtaining an A in the higher level paper we are very proud of both our business and student success. We held our first ever SOS seminar almost three years ago and the response has been phenomenal!

"The fact that they are free of charge and we offer them to all students, not just EF pupils, causes a genuine flurry of excitement among Cork secondary schools. As well as providing French seminars, we also invite specialist guest-speakers to the events to share their knowledge, tips and tricks all aimed at maximizing each student's potential."

This study seminar, to take place on Wednesday 3 April, is aimed aimed at Junior Cert business studies students and their parents. Fachtna O'Mahony, a partner in Quintas, the Cork based accountancy firm has agreed to speak to students and parents on the topic of Junior Certificate Business Studies.

"Quintas have run seminars on this subject for their clients for a number of years and it has proved to be very successful," said Ms Lynch.

"On the day he will give an overview of the subject to demonstrate its importance and cover critical areas such as exam question prediction, time management, the chief examiners report and the potential pitfalls to look out and time allocation. He will equip students with the essential information on how to excel in Junior Cert business studies."

The Junior Cert Business Studies seminar will take place Wednesday 3 April at the Clarion Hotel. To register contact Essential French at 021-4277474. For more information, essentialfrench.ie.
